

MUNITIONS QUIZ SEEKS CURB ON SHIPBUILDERS

Hints Collusion In Bids
For Navy Construction Jobs

10 PER CENT LIMIT
ON PROFITS ASKED

Committee Calls for "Policing" of Warship
Builders

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 24.—Demanding a big stick policy to "police" buildings of warships and prevent them from confusing "public defense needs with their private pockets," the senate munitions committee today urged a four-point legislative program to:

1. Prevent "collusion" in bidding for navy construction jobs.
2. Prevent American patents from getting into the hands of foreign powers.
3. Limit profits to 5 per cent of the total cost to the government, in cases where the government assumes the risks of the enterprise, or to 10 per cent where the government does not.
4. Require that shipbuilders' "lobbists" register with the government and disclose their income and expenditures.

"War Scares" Criticized
Some shipbuilders, said the committee headed by Senator Nye (R-N. D.), are certainly not above suspicion of willingness to wave the flag or to circulate war scares in the plain and simple interest of their own pocketbooks, regardless of results.

The committee, making a preliminary report on an investigation to determine whether "collusion" existed, held that there was "telepathy" among shipyard officials in dealing with each other so that each got the ship contracts it wanted at profits ranging as high as 36 per cent.

"The private shipbuilders," the report said, "should very definitely be policed in any and all moves made by them or through them to confuse public defense needs with their private pockets, or should be cut off entirely from the building of ships for the navy."

It declared the navy was "at the mercy" of the yards in preparing plans for war ships and equally helpless at determining what prices were fair.

"A series of bids are put before the navy," the report recited, "and the navy has to take the low one, and the taxpayers have to hope and pray that the low one is somewhere within a few million dollars of being reasonable."

Assuming that private interests could incite nations to armament races, the committee declared they were not the right parties to be left "close to the powder keg of international relations."

Construction of naval vessels was declared to be more costly in private yards than in government yards.

"While the evidence is not all in," the report said, "the indications are that the private yards cost the government from one to two million dollars more per cruiser than the navy yards."

The committee charged big shipbuilders with breaking up the Geneva naval limitation conference in 1927 and immediately launching a price increasing campaign that "made profits of 35 and 254 per cent on the cruisers."

The committee said there was "danger in allowing self-interested groups such as the shipbuilders" to be "in the close position of influence, as they are at present, to such an important instrument of national policy as the navy is."

Accusations Brought By

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—
Charges of "shocking conditions" at the state reformatory for women at Marysville will be investigated by Oakley Spaght, assistant state welfare director, he said today.

The charges, Spaght made known, were made by George C.
Williams, state chief of prison and food equipment, and embraced accusations of immorality and mistreatment of prisoners.

Spaght asserted "there is nothing especially new in these charges of Mr. Williams" and "it is surprising to me that conditions are as good as they are in our institutions in the light of the allowance given superintendents to maintain them with."

Blames State
Mrs. Louise Mittendorf, superintendent of the reformatory, admitted today that unwholesome conditions exist, but said the state was to blame. She said she had been striving for years to obtain a psychopathic ward and other improvements but that her requests to state officials had gone unheeded.

Spaght, too, said he knew sanitary conditions "are not what they should be in most of our institutions, but the fault lies in the fact that when times were good and the state had the money, sufficient funds were not appropriated to remedy these conditions."

While Williams could not be located here, unconfirmed reports were to the effect that he had stated inmates at Marysville reformatory were being confined in dungeons unfit for occupancy and that moral conditions were deplorable.

"Talked Out of Turn"
"I did not send Williams to Marysville," Spaght said. "I sent him to Mansfield reformatory late in May and that was the last official assignment."

Williams, a resident of Cincinnati, was appointed to his present post by Governor Davey.

Spaght indicated he felt Williams had "talked out of turn" about the Marysville reformatory, and that he would call the action of the agent to the attention of the governor.

Mystery Surrounds Sportsman's Death

NEW YORK, June 24.—The death of a young Long Island sportsman and broker was still tinged with mystery today, despite a "confession" attributed by Nassau county authorities to a 20-year-old servant girl.

The dead man, John Lyon Bur-ness, 30, was found in the garage at the home of William B. Brown, in Atlantic Beach, L. I., Saturday, apparently the victim of carbon monoxide poisoning.

District Attorney Martin W.
Littleton of Nassau county said Dorothy Kassady, a maid in the Brown home, had admitted she hit Burness on the head with a hammer, then started his car motor and closed the garage doors. An autopsy showed, however, that marks on Burness' face were made after death. Littleton said he doubted the truth of the girl's confession.

She was said to have told authorities she struck Brown with the hammer after he refused to pay her money she said he had promised her.

EX-SECURITY AGENT NABBED

William Raybell Charged With Bribery Plot by Federal Men

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, June 24.—A former investigator for the federal securities and exchange commission, seized in the telephone-equipped home of a wealthy oil royalties dealer, was held a federal prisoner today, accused by his captors of being the principal in a $27,500 bribery plot.

Federal authorities declined to say what charge would be placed against the man, William A. Ray-bell, 41, of Pelham, N. Y., pending arraignment during the day before a United States commissioner.

J. Edward Jones, who brought about the arrest, when Raybell called at the Jones estate in suburban Scarsdale yesterday, charged him with violation of a state bribery statute. Local authorities, however, have waived prosecution in favor of the government.

Jones, frequently a critic of the new deal and particularly the securities commission, was under a commission subpoena to appear next Thursday in a hearing connected with his registration of a security issue.

Raybell, who had resigned by request from the commission staff on June 20, was accused by Jones of offering to "fix things up" for $27,500, tipping him on points of the commission's cost and influencing documentary testimony in Jones' behalf.

Victim of Politics
From his contacts with the former agent, Jones asserted he learned he was the victim of political persecution and had been "framed."

The broker said Raybell first demanded $50,000 but on a visit to the Jones home Friday night agreed on $27,500, returning yesterday to collect a $250 down payment.

When Raybell, stocky baldish and married, drove up to the Jones residence yesterday detectives nestled behind radiators, pictures and in a radio cabinet in the oil man's "den." In the attic two stenographers sat with head-phones and poised pencils. A photograph recording device was hooked up.

Other listeners in were two department of justice agents with John J. Burns, sec. counsel, Lieutenant Arthur Carney of the Scarsdale police, Assistant District Attorney William Horan of Westchester county and two attorneys for Jones.

The broker said he handed Ray-bell the money and as he was about to depart the two federal men emerged. Jones declared the money later was found behind a door in the dining room.

Afterward Jones issued a lengthy formal statement, which, in part, said the arrest "will point the way toward a real racket, which should give true and loud warning to legitimate business men in this country who innocently place confidential information at the disposal of a commission which has a house of its own to clean x x x.

"I wish emphatically to state that nothing does attach any stigma to any of the honorable members of the commission, x x x I regard all of them honorable men who must place responsibility upon subordinates."

Efforts to reach Raybell for a statement were unavailing.

LISBON, June 24.—Charles A.
Haas, who was dismissed as superin-school in 1933, one year before his term was to expire, went into common pleas court here today, seeking to collect a salary of $207 which he alleges is due him for the unexpired term.

Haas, in a petition in common pleas court in January 3, 1934, against the Fairfield Township board of education members, A. E.
Wiesler, John Sutter, L. J. Kirk, E.
C. Cope and Lester Detweiler, claims the board dismissed him without filing any charges and that his contract terminated without cause.

According to the court records, Haas was notified by the board of his dismissal August 5, 1933. On August 16, 1933, the petition says,
"the board had a hearing on Haas' dismissal and the public was excluded." The board refused to conduct a hearing or require persons to testify against Haas."

A jury of five women and seven men was hearing the case in Judge

MARIETTA, O., June 24.—Com-gave notice today that West Vir-

Although William Frazier of doing business in Ohio.

Frazier was fined $100 and costs, suspended, upon his promise to re-

Frazier's boat was anchored at

State Fair Board Deficit For Last 14 Years $1,100,285

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, June 24.—Operation of the Ohio State fair, exclusive of payrolls and overhead, resulted in a loss of $1,100,285 during the last 14 years, the Ohio government survey reported today.

The deficit was almost equally divided between maintenance of the fair and of the 150-acre fair ground itself. The fair loss was $540,280, while that for keeping up the grounds was $560,000.

Statistics on file with the auditor of state, the survey committee reported, showed that the losses range from $7,396 in 1921 to $93,454 in 1931. During the same period, expenditures at the annual agricultural exhibit increased from $38,734 to $300,637 in 1934. Free admission and service tickets brought $8,711 through the turnstiles last year.

In addition to the losses reported, the committee said, the fair department had an annual payroll of about $40,000.

The state fair was first brought to Columbus in 1874 and the grounds on the north side of the city has been maintained at its present site since 1883.

ACCOMPLISHMENT

Col. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris eight years made him an international hero. Yet, in the long view, that is not his greatest accomplishment.

Unlike many men who become conspicuous by some outstanding performance, Col. Lindbergh has been able to regain his balance despite the flattery of admiration.

Gradually, he is establishing for himself a broader foundation of accomplishment than he stood on as the first man to perform a daring deed. On Friday, the world heard of his part in the development of a piece of apparatus which enables science to keep vital organs alive and functioning outside the human body. A new horizon of research has been brought to view.

Where are the heroes of yesterday? Many, not all, have outlived the tenure of their fame, resentful of their inability to remain in the limelight. Col. Lindbergh, who might have made the same error, somehow escaped it. His admirers do not believe it was accidental.

CONTAGION

Secretary of Labor Perkins has an interesting theory about the cause of Ohio's numerous strikes. He doesn't believe they are the result of a deliberate plan by labor groups, but rather the manifestation of "contagion." The department of labor is conducting a study in the state to discover what is the matter.

Needless to say, Ohio will read the results of the study with a great deal of interest, if they are published. It is inclined to say offhand that the "contagion" may be traced to sources and to methods that the department of labor will be reluctant to delve into too deeply lest feelings be hurt—feelings which the department of labor is supposed to handle delicately.

DIVIDERS

Redistribution of wealth makes a good rallying cry for politicians. It appeals to every voter who thinks he would gain something in the process.

The idea is fascinating. It fits into the new deal program perfectly. The poker chips all will be turned in and divided equally. Then everybody will be able to win.

In fact, there's only one thing obviously wrong with redistributing wealth. It would be a good deal like redistributing hair, so bald men would get what their more fortunate brothers didn't need. Hair can't be transplanted successfully. Neither can wealth. It has a tendency to disappear when it is taken from its original environment.

Wealth has to be developed and created. Occasionally, a lucky fellow who happens to get a bright idea at the right time and in the right place succeeds in piling up an unusual amount of it. Thereupon, people start talking about the desirability of getting their fingers into his money bags. He has too much power, they say. He isn't good for the country. He's unpatriotic, because he has a lot of money and the power that goes with it.

It's plain that men with huge fortunes are not going to be able to live happily in the United States much longer. The clamor for their gold has become so widespread that even the White House is joining in the chorus: "Redistribute the wealth!"

The process is going to be slow. The millennium will be postponed indefinitely. In fact, it may be many years before a disillusioned politician stumbles one day on to the idea that a country which is more interested in dividing up the fortunes of men who have made money than in building up the fortunes of men who are trying to make money probably is on the wrong track. That will be more obvious after the wealth dividers have discovered that the value of a fortune is determined largely by its connection with its builder. When the connection is broken, value tends to disappear. The dividers would find themselves splitting up a constantly decreasing pile of gold, but that thought won't deter them.

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, June 25

A fairly successful and gratifying day is forecast from the predominant lunar transits. There is sign of favors, preferment or promotion in employment, and business will be found to have profitable and advancing trends. Particularly should all pertaining to writings, publicity, promotion and new projects and contracts flourish.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a fairly active and prosperous year, with employment offering advancement, favors and preferment from superiors or those in place and power. Business also is under a rather progressive sign, with all pertaining to writings, publicity and promotion under fortunate planetary influence. New plans and contracts may be safely considered as well.

A child born on this day may be versatile, shrewd and a bright and clever talker. This should advance it in employment as well as business. It may lean to literature or advertising.

Notable nativity: Charles T. Yorkes, capitalist.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 24—Diary: On a bus top to Ha. Phyle's and a comely lass across the aisle, foxed with drink, suggested a magazine piece on modern manners—"Pickled Peaches." Then to say hello to the Watterson Rothackers and Virginia and home, hearing my poor book had gone into the second edition the second day.

By and by Ryley Cooper came bubbly with enthusiasm for his recent fling at reporting in Tacoma. So on a bargain safari with my wife and picked up a banjo clock, then to Maybelle Manning's to sit awhile. And walking toward 290 came upon the red-cheeked chef Oscar and the debonaire Peter Arno.

Dinner on a Casino verandah and Grover Whalen there, the first time ever I saw him in mufti after 8 p. m. And talked a moment to Fifi Widener Wicherfeld, fetching in a flame-red dotted swiss evening gown. So to bed reading Dreiser's "Moods," of which he has more than anyone I know.

Not in memory has Central Park been so freely used by cliff dwellers as this summer. The open air Tavern on the Green, so gaily unbrellaed, is packed for lunch and dinner. The many new baseball grounds and tennis courts are monopolized from early until late. Walks are filled with strollers and benches with stary-eyed lovers. The new zoo, for years visited by only a handful daily, is now swarming with visitors. More than 100 row boats have been added to the lake and there is a constant waiting line. The restricted roadway and Mall for roller skaters are also thronged often until midnight.

A zoo always reminds me of a sophomore caper Howard Acton, Don Allen and I used to indulge in Cincinnati. We would board a zoo-bound street car at the barn. Acton sitting one seat behind Allen up front and I in a rear seat. After a goodly number of passengers had been picked up, Acton would profess suddenly to recognize Allen and they embarked on a romantic blouze with loud references to their last meeting at a wild animal roundup on the African veldt. It was a routine of tall lying about trapping ferocious beasts. Finally Allen would inquire: "What-ever became of your white Malay body servant—the one whose tongue was cut out by the Uganda savages?" Acton would turn, clap his hands and motion for me. And I would come up and mouth an in-articulate hobble gobble. We thought we were cards in quite an act. I wonder if we ever put it over!

Personal nomination for the ace of orchestra pianists—Eddie Duchin.

It's been interesting to watch the flowering of young Eddie Duchin. Only a few years ago at 19, he was helping to pay for a pharmacy course at Columbia by playing the piano evenings in Leo Reisman's orchestra. A gangling New England bumpkin who seemed mostly knuckles and teeth, he could make a piano go to town, a wizard at improvisation. Sid Solomon installed him as leader of an orchestra at the Casino. Today at 24, he has a $5,000 a week income and is a star of the radio and an attraction that fills theatres on tour. He now wears evening clothes with the glossy non-chalance of Noel Coward, has mastered the art of small talk and has already sailed away in selected securities a quarter million. As an anti-climax he recently married the very accomplished and beautiful Marjorie Oelrichs, a Social Registerite and shining debutante of the top drawer set.

Judging from the next morning's critical blasts the most terrible play of this season was by a Bronx newspaperman about newspapermen and titled: "Them's the Reporters!" Some of its lines were so impertinently filthy that hardy old first nighters gulped and rushed out for air, holding their noses enroute.

A cross-my-heart true story: A roaming and gratuitous car shiner near Sherry's was polishing a parked car in hopes of the tip. The owner, arriving, handed out a coin. They glanced at each other. The polisher dropped the coin suddenly and walked stiffly away. They were classmates at college eight years ago.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York CityChlorosis Is Benefited By Sun
Chlorosis is a sort of anemic condition rather commonly found in young women between the ages of 18 and 25 years.

It is rarely encountered in males. Years ago, before girls were actively engaged in outdoor exercise and sports as they are today, the disease was more prevalent. Without an abundance of fresh air and sunshine, chlorosis is likely to develop.

The disease should be suspected when the young person becomes irritable, extremely sensitive, sad, and mentally distressed. Chlorosis is often spoken of as the "green sickness," because of the greenish-yellow color of the skin.

In severe cases, the face, hands and ankles become swollen. The sufferer loses weight, has no desire for food and as a rule suffers from various digestive disturbances. Constipation is a common complaint.

Improves Quickly
She cries upon the slightest provocation. Fainting spells, breathlessness, palpitation of the heart, and fever are other symptoms.

It is amazing how quickly the victim of chlorosis improves when she gets proper diet, fresh air and sunshine. A tonic is sometimes given, but the best medicine is outdoor life and simple, nourishing food. Within a very short time the complexion loses its greenish hue and the appetite returns. There is gain in weight, with enjoyment in eating and marked improvement in the disposition.

Sometimes a case of chlorosis is erroneously diagnosed by the family as a mild form of some mental disturbance. But it is gratifying to see how quickly the patient responds to the simple treatment I have mentioned.

Every effort should be made to improve the general health. Constipation must be overcome. If necessary a daily enema should be taken. The diet should include foods that have laxative properties, such as stewed fruits and vegetables. To the very young sufferer, it is a good plan to give cod-liver oil daily.

Meals Regular

Meals should be taken at regular hours and the food must be thoroughly masticated. At least six to eight glasses of water should be taken daily. Exercise is beneficial but should be indulged in moderately. As the strength returns it may be increased.

All underlying physical defects should be corrected. If there are centers of infection, for example, in diseased teeth, tonsils and nasal sinuses, these must be remedied. The patient should avoid poorly ventilated, overheated and badly lighted rooms.

As I have pointed out, sunbaths are extremely beneficial. If the weather is not suitable benefit may be obtained from the use of modern lamps, pretty good substitutes for the sun.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo.—Mrs. Casper Gantz celebrated her 100th birthday by rising early to prepare her anniversary dinner, attended by her eight sons, nine grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

WHOSE WIFE?

A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by CLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

CHAPTER XVIII

So? Cyrus K pursed his lips and nodded his head slowly. "So? Well now, I'd call this rather a full day, wouldn't you?"

"I don't see where we're going to get any more," Ingles complained. "Everything just seems to contradict the last fact we found out."

"What fact have we found out?" asked Cyrus K. innocently.

Well, the identification of the body is a fact. You'll have to admit that."

"Yes. The identification is a fact."

Lawrence Vane glanced up quickly from his brooding silence, as he heard the odd phrasing that Mantel had used. As his eyes fastened on the gentle yet powerful features of Cyrus K, the little detective looked him squarely in the eyes, and suddenly illuminated his whole face with one of his rare and charming smiles.

"Ingles," he turned to the Inspector, "I wonder if you could leave me alone for a while with Vane—sure you have much to attend to at headquarters and I have much to attend to here. I will keep closely in touch with you, and let you know any development that I think you should know. But," he smiled at Ingles to soften his words, "I think this is the parting of the ways—this is where you take the high road and I'll take the low road. You have your duty to do to your oath. I have my duty to do to your friend."

Ingles stood up and held out his hand to Vane.

"I'm sorry, Lawrence," he said. "Sorry about it all—I know you're guilty—but I hope to God that he gets you out of it." He turned to Mantel and shook his hand in a grip that would have made a weakling wince. "Good luck to you," he said simply. "If there is anything I can do—anything I can do—let me know. You know I'll do it."

He turned on his heel and walked out.

"There goes a fine man," Cyrus K looked after him. "I'm sorry for him. It's a terrible thing to be both a police officer—and a good friend—sometimes."

Lawrence Vane slumped in his chair.

"I'm in a daze," he said, and rubbed his hand across his eyes. "I don't know yet exactly what it is all about."

"That's what I'm here to try and find out," said Mantel briskly. He drew up a chair close to the younger man. "Now Mr. Vane, I want to ask you a few questions—and some of them are pretty sure to hurt."

"Go ahead," said Vane. "I don't think I can be hurt any more—I think I've lost the power to feel."

"Had you heard—recently—anything about your wife's manner of life before she married you?" Cyrus K went straight to the point.

"Yes, I had horrible things. I tried not to believe them—Why, Mr. Mantel," he laid one hand on Mantel's knee. "I couldn't believe that anyone as beautiful as Isobel could be... as rotten as they said she was."

"But did you come to believe it at last?"

"Yes," Vane's head dropped.

"When?"

"The night she disappeared."

"You mean the night she was killed?"

"All right. Have it that way if you want to."

"When you finally came to believe these things about her, how did you feel?" Mantel tried to be gentle.

"I was sorry for her," said Vane simply. "I felt that she had been more wronged than sinning. She was left alone when she was so young—she never had a chance in life. I felt that I could pull her out of all this wrong way of living that circumstances had forced her into."

"I see," Cyrus K. was quiet. "So you didn't hate her?"

"Hate her?" Vane repeated sadly. "No. I loved her for the woman she might have been—the woman she still might be. And I pitied her."

"Did you still love her, Mr. Vane?" Cyrus K insisted quietly.

"Love her?" Vane spoke as though weighing the little four-letter word. "Love? That's hard to say. Mr. Mantel, I loved the ideal of womanhood I had always loved. I had thought that she represented it. I found out that was not so. That was not her fault—many a person has made a mistake before placing the garment of an ideal upon a human form; and many another has suffered when discovering the ideal had feet of clay. But that

Kentucky Feud Claims New Victim In Shootings Around Manchester

BY DILLARD STOKES.
Associated Press Staff Writer

MANCHESTER, Ky., June 24.—A cemetery in the Kentucky mountains today claimed the body of Bobbie Baker, who died in an automobile, the victim of an assassin's bullet, on the main street of this feud-ridden town.

He came to his native haunts—back to the area where his father, grandfather, brother and uncle had been shot down—to visit relatives. It was his first appearance in Clay county since he had gone to live at Greensburg, Ind., several years ago. The day after his arrival, he too, had gone to violent death.

His funeral followed closely that of another victim of gunfire, James Cupp, who was killed a week ago. Cupp's enemies harassed him even after death, firing from ambush on the funeral cortege as it proceeded to the family burial plot.

Another grave was prepared, more than a mile away, and he was buried there the following day.

Reports that national guardsmen would invade Clay county to probe the killings, as was done several months ago in an investigation of an alleged auto theft ring, were put to rest by Adj. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt at Frankfort.

Denhardt, after conferring with Gov. Ruby Laffoon, said nothing could be accomplished by sending troops into Clay county, at this time.

Prominent citizens here have indicated they would urge Circuit Judge W. E. Begley to call a special session of the grand jury to launch an investigation.

Judge Begley said he would take such action if there was any evidence for a grand jury to act upon.

Inquiry into the Baker slaying by County Judge J. M. Lytle thus far has proved fruitless.

In the long chain of feud killings in this remote mountain area, that of commonwealth's attorney, Frank Baker, cousin of Bobby, stands out as the most audacious. The official was shot down by rifle-men hidden in the courthouse here three years ago. With the attorney at the time was John Brockman, who was also killed. Their bodies lay for five hours in the street where they fell.

Four men were indicted but never went to trial. When trial time came the indictments were missing. No record of new indictments being voted has been found.

C. P. Stevens, Manchester police judge, was killed by shotgun slugs from a speeding car shortly before the Baker-Brockman slaying.

Tom Baker, father of Bobby, was killed by a rifleman while he was waiting trial on a charge of killing Sheriff Will White. The father was shot down in the public square while troops were guarding him.

George W. Baker, the father, met a like fate a few years before and Jim Baker, Bobby's brother, was slain ten years ago.

Bobby was buried yesterday.

CHICAGO — A baby groundhog was captured last summer by Billy Dunn. He fed it with an eye-dropper, and last fall, turned it loose. It disappeared. This spring, however, a full-grown groundhog crawled from under an old shed to greet Billy.

TIFFIN, O. — If Allen E. Seele hadn't happened to have shut off the power a moment before, he would have suffered a horrible death from a circular saw. As it was, Seele fell against the saw but it came to a stop after cutting through his clothing.

Today's Pattern

"RIGHT ABOUT THE HOUSE" Pattern 2335

Looking just right about the house and neatly tailored enough for street or porch appearance is no trick at all for the handy woman who knows how to run up a seam! Here are as many little jobs to be done outdoors as indoors in the summer, so the clever matron likes the extra formality the flattering revers lend the summer house frock. The pleated sleeve—besides being flattering—allows for plenty of action and the paneled skirt with its roomy pockets has a way with it, if the hips are just a bit too generous! A neat pin-stripe cotton or tailored geometric design would be excellent. An eyelet batiste makes a novel street dress.

Pattern 2335 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 takes 4 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Divorcee Is Slain, Wellsburg Man Now Sorry He Shot Her
(By Associated Press)
WHEELING, W. Va., June 24—While doctors watched the condition of Alex Carey, 37, Wellsburg cemetery worker, prosecutor's assistants scanned an alleged confession in which they said he admitted slaying Mrs. Mildred Vollhardt, attractive 38-year-old divorcee who had lived in Carey's home eight years.

Under guard in a hospital where he is expected to recover from a bullet wound, Carey was quoted by Deputy Russell Riggs as expressing over and over again his regret at the death of "the girl I loved more than anything else. Believe me, I'm more than sorry for this."

In the alleged statement, witnessed by Riggs, Carey was quoted as saying Mrs. Vollhardt had resided for eight years with Carey and his wife and eight children in the Wellsburg home. Saturday, the purported statement continued, he came to Wheeling to induce Mrs. Vollhardt, who was visiting her mother, to return with him.

A quarrel followed, the alleged confession continued, and Carey fired three shots at the divorcee, killing her. He shot himself in the chest, but the bullet missed his heart.

Mrs. Carey visited her husband in the hospital ward and embraced him tearfully but did not talk about the shooting. Mrs. Vollhardt was to be buried in Wheeling today.

Tuesday and Wednesday the State theater will show a new Charlie Chan mystery, this time called "Charlie Chan in Egypt." Warner Oland is again Charlie Chan and other in the cast with him are Pat Peterson, Thomas Beck and Stepin Fetchit.

The story carries Chan to the ancient Valley of the Kings amid the tombs of the mighty Pharaohs who ruled Egypt thousands of years ago.

An expedition from the French Historical society is working near Luxor on the Nile excavating in tombs of Ameti, an ancient high priest. Priceless gold and jewels are stolen from the tomb.

Chan is hired by the society to trace the thieves. Three murders occur and every one wonders whether it was Sekmet, the cat-headed Egyptian goddess of vengeance who struck down those disturbing the monarchs in their slumber.

Death casts its shadow over the ST. LOUIS—Chances that a Missourian will be poisoned by snakebite are only one in eight, according to R. Martin Perkins of the St. Louis Zoological Gardens. Of forty snakes native to the state, only five are poisonous: the moccasin, the copperhead and three varieties of rattlesnake.

WOBURN, Mass.—Edward Callahan, custodian of the town hall here, noticed plants sprouting on the well-kept lawn. Investigation disclosed that the plants were the result of bears carelessly scattered after a "beano" game during a street carnival.
